A woman on the run changes identities and spends a decade learning to become someone else. A police detective, whose wife of nearly thirty years has died, is left alone, wondering where to turn in plotting a course for his life without her. They meet in a retirement community for serious-minded nudists, she as the receptionist for this entrepreneurial business and he as the new head of the security force that one day will grow into a police department. Neither one has entered into this new phase of their life with the intention of finding someone to love, but fate - and life - often have other plans for those who hold in them the capacity to love to the fullest. A danger from her past enters in and forces them to make the hardest decisions of their lives in order to save those they love. The outcome may shake and destroy everything they have built thus far, forcing both of them to take stock of themselves and each other. Does either of them have what it takes to overcome this dark splotch on what had been a pristine relationship born in the stars, or will they admit defeat and move on to whatever life holds next for them elsewhere along their journeys? Since the Moment We Met - An intoxicating tale of loss, life, betrayal, and love without boundaries.
