Being a parent is hard enough when you're dealing with a teenage daughter, especially when they don't talk much about their feelings. So, Christina Quinn takes Felicia to visit her own mother, knowing how close the two are.

When they arrive, Christina realizes what she can do to reach out to Felicia. She tells her daughter a story about herself when she was her age, during the Civil Rights era when racial tensions were high. She tells of love and loss as she reveals her relationship with a boy named Bud...A boy who would play a pivotal role in her life.
